Cadillac Beach is a gripping novel that follows the lives of three families over three generations, as they navigate the challenges and triumphs of life in a small beach town.

The novel begins in the early 1900s, with the arrival of the first of the three families, the MacLeods, to Cadillac Beach. The MacLeods are a wealthy family from Boston, and they quickly become the town's elite. The second family, the O'Connors, arrives in the 1940s. The O'Connors are a working-class family from Ireland, and they struggle to make a living in the small town.

The third family, the Carters, arrives in the 1970s. The Carters are a black family from Detroit, and they face discrimination and prejudice from the town's white residents.

Despite their differences, the three families are all connected by their shared experiences of life in Cadillac Beach. Over the years, they witness the town's growth and transformation, and they face their own personal challenges and triumphs.

Cadillac Beach is a beautifully written novel that explores the complex relationships between family, friends, and neighbors. It is a story about love, loss, betrayal, and redemption. It is a story that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.
