Feeding

Betta fish are carnivores and should be fed a diet of live or frozen foods, such as brine shrimp, bloodworms, or daphnia. You can also feed your betta fish pellets or flakes, but these should only be given as a supplement to their main diet.

Behavior

Betta fish are known for their aggressive behavior, but they can also be very friendly and playful. Betta fish will often flare their gills and fins at each other, but this is usually just a display of dominance and not a sign of aggression. Betta fish can also be kept in community tanks with other peaceful fish, such as tetras or guppies.

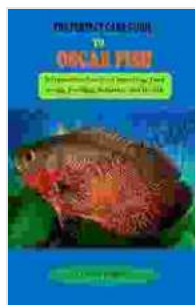

Health

Betta fish are susceptible to a number of health problems, including fin rot, dropsy, and swim bladder disease. Fin rot is a bacterial infection that can cause the fins to become frayed and eroded. Dropsy is a condition that causes the body to swell with fluid. Swim bladder disease is a condition that can cause the fish to float at the surface of the water or sink to the bottom.

Betta fish can be rewarding pets, but they can also be challenging to care for. By following the tips in this guide, you can provide your betta fish with the best possible care and help them live a long and healthy life.
